Chris Warner

Introduction

Chris Warner has spent the last 30 years helping teams reach their summit.

Like all of us, Chris is a business leader, dealing with the day to day challenges of growing a company in a tough economy. His team of 250 employees, spread over multiple locations, will serve over 750,000 customers this year.

Chris teaches leadership at the Wharton School of Business and to CEO groups, executives at Fortune 100 Companies, and to covert and special operations teams in the US Intelligence and Defense Agencies. He specializes in teams that face challenges in which failure is not an option. His clients range from the Baltimore Ravens to Google to the National Counter Terrorism Task Force.

Chris is also an author and an Emmy Nominated Film Maker. He starred in television programs on ABC, NBC, and the History Channel.

And Chris is one of America's most successful mountaineers. He has led over 200 international expeditions. He guided the first reality show on Everest, and safely led his team to the summit of K2, the world's most deadly mountain.

Today Chris will be sharing an epic story about a team reaching their peak. Our hope is that this extreme story of survival will give us the tools needed to guide our team to our next summit.

Please welcome Chris to _____.
